Former Carmel football star now paratrooper in Baghdad

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHENEVER ED Canadas hears about parents whose sons and daughters are among the troops stationed in the Middle East, he can relate. His son, Ed Canadas III, jumps out of airplanes into enemy territory for a living and has been serving in Iraq since last February.

Born and raised in Carmel Valley, the younger Canadas was an all-league football player at Carmel High School, an all-state linebacker at Monterey Peninsula College and had intended to play at the University of Nevada Las Vegas.

Instead, he joined the Army on April 9, 2002.

"He'd had time to think about 9/11, and it wore on him," his father said. "He wasn't ready to go to college."

Following boot camp in Fort Benning, Ga., Canadas volunteered for airborne school and, after successful training and several jumps, moved to Fort Bragg in August 2002.

The following February, he left for the Middle East as an elite member of the 325th Falcon Brigade of the 82nd Airborne.

"He enjoys being a paratrooper jumping out of planes, because he's kind of a wild and crazy guy anyway," his father said, adding that Canadas has been known to jump off roofs into swimming pools.

With a long history that includes behind-enemy-lines drops into vital WWII battles in Sicily, Normandy and Holland, 82nd Airborne paratroopers specialize in taking airfields, bridges and other strategic strongholds deep in hostile territory.

Earthquake sends fire trucks scurrying

■ Fire station not safe

By PAUL MILLER

THE 6.5-MAGNITUDE earthquake that rocked San Luis Obispo County Monday morning, collapsing an unreinforced masonry building and crushing two women, sent rolling shock waves through Carmel but caused no significant damage, according to city officials. The most dramatic effect in town was not what the earthquake did but what it might have done to the seismically unsound firehouse on Sixth Avenue. As soon as they realized an earthquake was underway, firefighters moved quickly to ensure their trucks weren't trapped in a damaged or collapsed building.

"The earthquake lasted long enough that there was time to talk about it while it was still going on," said fire chief Sidney Reade, who rode out the quake at the fire station in Carmel Valley where she is also chief. "The vehicles were moving back and forth — it was obvious it was an earthquake."

Before the shaking stopped, she called the Carmel fire house, where an earthquake drill was soon launched.

"The first thing we did was open all the garage doors, because if the building shifted they could be jammed shut," said firefighter Ian Watts.

Firefighters then started moving the entire fleet of emergency vehicles out.

After the 6.5 earthquake rumbled through town Monday, emergency vehicles lined Sixth Avenue — refugees from the city's fire house which is built of unreinforced concrete and masonry.

New Year's resolution: REDISCOVER YOUR HOME TOWN

By HILARY HANLON

THE NEW Year brings with it the opportunity to break old routines, and one resolution locals should make this Jan. 1 is to become reacquainted with their home town. Residents may consider themselves familiar with their city, but, in fact, often overlook some of Carmel's most intriguing aspects — specifically, its many hidden courts and passageways.

"Carmel-by-the Sea was originally created as a pedestrian city. All its signage is scaled to the pedestrian and not to the automobile," says Gale Wrausman, owner of Carmel Walks.

Walking from one end of town to the other through its center, you can explore over 60 courtyards, hidden passageways and lanes. Nestled between buildings and off the beaten path, these spaces carry with them a unique history and the bewitching qualities that have defined the city.

"The courtyards and passageways of Carmel really fall into two categories — historic and recent," says Kay Prine, Carmel Heritage board member and long-time resident.

One historic courtyard that clearly reflects the European-Spanish influence of early Carmel is El Paseo Court on the east side of Dolores, just north of Seventh, with its grand archways of stucco, tile roofs dating back to the 1920s, and fanciful sculpture by Jo Mora.

Across from the Carmel Post Office on Dolores is the Del Dono Court containing several art galleries and a print and copy business. This courtyard's stout wooden structure and modern lines put it in the "recent" column.

"Early in Carmel's history the planning commission attempted to create a sort of Mediterranean theme in the architecture but, in time, what emerged was really a mix of many different styles of building. The eclectic nature of Carmel's buildings and courtyards is a truer reflection of the town's history and the diverse residents that lived there," says Prine.

Many of Carmel's passageways and gardens are graced with the wrought iron of Carmel's master blacksmith, Francis Whitaker, whose forge, now the Forge in the Forest Restaurant, was opened in the 1930s. He worked with devotion on hundreds of railings, doorknobs, window guards and gates that are prominent throughout the village today.

"The attractive hand rails along the steps in the Los Tiendas Courtyard on Dolores and Ocean, are his," says Prine.

From behind an impressive wrought iron gate, at the end of a mossy brick pathway, you can spy The Secret Garden Courtyard on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth. The sounds of trickling fountains and birdsong are your fanciful companions as you make your way down the narrow path toward a specialty garden shop.

The Red Eagle Trail, considered an historic passageway, connects Mission and San Carlos in the block between Ocean

One of the spots residents often overlook is this sunny garden shop in the hidden La Rambla Court on the west side of Lincoln between Sixth and Seventh Avenues.

Garden club spreads live Christmas cheer

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CONTINUING THEIR annual tradition of bringing holiday spirit into the lives of the ill and homebound, members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club decorated and delivered 150 small topiaries and many large arrangements throughout the city and Peninsula.

"They do that every year to provide for people who don't always have a lot of Christmas cheer," said Hospice Home Care program manager Mary Brusuelas. "We really do appreciate it."

Hospice workers gladly accepted the 50 small ivy topiaries adorned with birds, berries and other ornaments Dec. 11 and delivered them to patients and residents in nursing homes, according to Brusuelas.

"A lot of those people are there because they don't have any family anymore and don't have anyone to visit them," she said. "So they love it."

member services for the Carmel Foundation, said the 60 topiaries it received last week are already in homebound members' rooms, while the 12 larger arrangements adorn tables in the dining room — a touch especially appreciated on Christmas day.

"For some of these people, that's the only holiday decoration they have, and some of them actually keep them all year long," she said. "One of our members had hers from last year in perfect working order."

Gaines said she relishes working in a community where nonprofits take care of each other.

"We appreciate it very, very much, because it's not something we could provide on our own," she said. "We look forward to it every year."

Led by chairwoman Julie Conner, the garden club members who gathered at the Church of the Wayfarer Dec. 11 to decorate the topiaries also donated 31 pieces to Harrison Memorial Library's senior outreach program and sprung for the live tree decorated by children at the Park Branch.

Pine Cone denied bid to move to historic motel property

By KIRSTIE WILDE

ALTHOUGH THE majority of the planning commissioners clearly wanted to help The Carmel Pine Cone find a legal way to move its offices to an old motel downtown, the plan failed at a special meeting at city hall Tuesday night.

The newspaper is in escrow to buy the Forest Manor Lodge, a four-unit motel which sits on a small, triangular city block bounded by Ocean Avenue, Mountain View and Torres Street, across from Carmel Plaza shopping center. If the city had given permission for the motel to be converted to offices for The Pine Cone, it would mark the first time since the 1950s that the newspaper would be its own landlord. Publisher Paul Miller said owning a permanent home in Carmel would be important for the long-term health of his business, the oldest in the city.

"Keeping a newspaper in good financial shape is very difficult, especially considering the competition from the Internet and the big newspaper chains," Miller said. "We are trying to guarantee the future of The Pine Cone as an independent voice for Carmel by giving it a permanent home."

Senior planner Brian Roseth, who wrote the staff report for The Pine Cone's proposed move from Mission and Fourth to Ocean and Mountain View, concluded that it could not have a significant negative impact on the environment, and therefore warranted a "negative declaration" under the California Environmental Quality Act. He recommended the planning commission approve a zoning amendment that would make it possible for The Pine Cone to use the motel property, which is in a single-family zone but is virtually surrounded by non-residential property.

An independent traffic study conducted by Higgins Associates concluded that the traffic and parking demands from Pine Cone employees would not be significantly different from those created by current motel guests and staff.

In its application to the city, The Pine Cone traced the history of the property back to its most famous owner, Johan Hagemeyer, a prominent photographer who built a large gallery, studio and retail photography business on the site in 1923. There he captured on film the portraits of Salvador Dali, Albert Einstein, Edward Weston, Robinson Jeffers and many other prominent citizens and visitors to old Carmel. After running his business for a quarter century, Hagemeyer

AMR will bid on new contract

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A SPOKESMAN for AMR, the company that provides ambulance service in most of the Monterey Peninsula, reacted angrily to reports that his company would pull out of the county when the current contract is up at the end of next year.

"We intend to bid on the new contract and continue providing the best ambulance service possible for the people of Monterey County," said Matt Edwards.

He also denied that his company had ever asked for a 98 percent increase in ambulance service prices. "The highest we ever requested was 88 percent," Edwards said.

After complaints from AMR that it was losing money because of big increases in costs and cuts in reimbursements from Medicare and Medical since it started providing local ambulance service in 1997, the board of supervisors approved a 60 percent increase in the price of an ambulance ride. Beginning next week, it will cost $1,008 plus $23.50 a mile to have AMR take you to the hospital.

The Carmel ambulance service is considering a similar rate increase.

RECYCLE YOUR TREE

AGAIN THIS year, the Monterey Regional Waste Management District will make it easy to keep your Christmas tree out of the landfill.

Free curbside pick-up is available to all residents living in single family homes who have greenwaste service, the MRWMD said.

Trees should be cut into 3-foot lengths and deposited in the yard waste cart which then can be placed at the curb on the regular trash pick-up day.

Don't forget to remove the tree stand and all decorations, tinsel and lights. Flocked trees cannot be recycled.

Or, you can take your tree to the drop-off location at the Forest Theater (Mountain View near Guadalupe) until Jan. 9.

Other drop-off locations open until Jan. 9 include:

■ The Corporation Yard in Pebble Beach (4005 Sunridge)

■ Across from the Seaside Post Office (1100 block of Broadway)

■ The MRWMD landfill, two miles north of Marina (14201 Del Monte Blvd.). Limited to three trees per vehicle.

Recycled trees are ground up into mulch and composted, the district said. At the Marina facility, compost made from the mulch is available by the bag or truckload. Prices start at $4 per bag or $50 per ton.

For more information about the recycling or the compost, please call the District's Recycling Hotline at 384-5313.

TRUDY ANNE DEGROAT died Nov. 3 following a battle with cancer. She was 57.

A native of Ohio, she met her first husband, Keith MacFarlane at Ohio State University. The couple moved to California where she gave birth to her daughter, Wendy. The couple divorced soon after and mother and daughter moved to Mermaid Lane in Pacific Grove, where friends and neighbors referred to her as "Mayor of Mermaid," due to her social and political involvement there.

She graduated from the MPC Police Academy in 1975 but decided that, as a single mother, a safer career would be preferable, so she worked 12 years on the express line at the downtown Monterey Safeway.

Moving to Big Sur in 1988, she married Bill DeGroat, and became stepmother to his children, Erik and Anya. Mrs. DeGroat earned her EMT certification and worked at the Big Sur Health Center as receptionist and managed the front office until 1994. In 1993 she earned her massage certification, and the DeGroats then moved to Carmel Valley and finally back to Pacific Grove.

In 2001 the DeGroats separated, but remained friends. She met her soul mate, Max Coon, the following year.

In addition to her daughter and stepchildren, she is survived by her brother, Nelson Brinkman of North Carolina and four stepgrandchildren.

There will be a potluck open house celebration of life gathering for Trudy Anne from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 17, 2004 at Chautauqua Hall, 16th and Central, Pacific Grove.

MARIO AMOROSO, San Francisco Police Department veteran who served on the Del Monte Forest Property Owners Association traffic safety and parking committee until the end of his life, died Nov. 15. He was 75.

A Seattle native who came to San Francisco with his family as a toddler, Mr. Amoroso attended Galileo High School and San Francisco City College. He played trumpet in a swing band and worked as a baker before he began his career with the SFPD as a patrolman in 1952. In 1955 he married his wife of 48 years, Sally Dunne. He was promoted to deputy chief in 1976 and retired in 1980. Mr. Amoroso's son and nephew followed him in the field of law enforcement. Concurrently with his police career, Mr. Amoroso enlisted in the California National Guard and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve. He served for 37 years. The couple moved to Burlingame in 1983 and to Pebble Beach in 1999.

Mr. Amoroso is survived by his parents, Salvatore and Doralba; brothers Armond and Frank; wife of 48 years Sally; sons Jack and Andy and daughters Sarah Jane and Sheila; six grandchildren and two great-granddaughters; plus numerous nieces and nephews.

Mr. Amoroso was a member of St. Angela's Catholic Church, the Golden Gate Breakfast Club, S.F. Police Officers Association, Knights of Columbus, the Retired Military Officers Association and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Memorials are suggested to the St. Vincent de Paul Society, Boys and Girls Club of San Francisco or the Animal Friends Rescue Project.

JOHANNA DOELMAN DIRKSEN, longtime resident of Carmel-by-the-Sea, died Nov. 18 in Oregon at age 97.

Her life story extended around the world, from her birth in the Netherlands to college graduation in 1929 in Wisconsin, to Brussels, Belgium, where she gave birth to her twin sons, Hans and Frans. With her husband and two boys, she fled from Europe in 1940 to the Dutch East Indies, where the invading Japanese army put the family in an internment camp. Within six months her husband died and in 1944 her sons, age 11, were taken from her to a separate camp, their fate unknown to her.

In 1945 her sons found their mother alive in Camp Lampersarie, but weighing 87 pounds. From Java to Singapore, they journeyed to California, arriving in March 1946 and locating that year in Carmel.

She married Eugene Dirksen in 1963. He died in 1970.

She earned some fame for her many years of early morning walks on Carmel Beach, where she frequently — even in her 80s — dove into the ocean for a few minutes' swim.

She moved to Oregon in 2000 where her care was overseen by her son, Hans.

Mrs. Dirksen is survived by her sons; six grandchildren and four great-granddaughters.

A celebration of her life is planned for next spring in Carmel at the home of her longtime friend, Belinda Vidor Holliday.

Remembrances may be directed to the Carmel Foundation or the SPCA of Monterey County.

ROSALEE MURPHY GLADNEY, 89, who with her sister, Kathleen, were the first twins born in Carmel and whose father, M.J. Murphy, was an early developer, builder and lumberyard owner in Carmel, died Nov. 16 at her Carmel Valley home.

As a member of the Carmel Heritage Society, Mrs. Gladney shared her knowledge of local history and was involved in the preservation of Carmel buildings, including the First Murphy House. The business her father founded, Murphy Lumber, remains in the family, being operated by her son, Tom.

Mrs. Gladney is survived by her sons, James of Riverside, Thomas of Carmel Valley and Daniel of Washington; four grandsons; two granddaughters and two great-grandsons. She was preceded in death by her husband, Andrew Gladney in 1993, and her siblings, Patricia Jones and Kathleen and Frank.

Memorials are suggested to the Carmel Valley Volunteers, Box 965, Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

LOUISE REUTTER WINSTED, 89, 33-year resident of Carmel, died Nov. 20. She was 89.

Born in St. Joseph, Mo., she met and married Lt. Ray Winsted in 1942. She spent the next 30 years as an active Army wife, moving often as her husband was assigned to Army installations in Europe and the United States. She was an sold his property and left the city in 1947. The new owner then converted the buildings to a motel which has been renting rooms to tourists for 56 years. The Pine Cone's application pointed out that the property has been in continuous commercial use for all of its 80 years, long before the city drew lines around the town to divide it into residential and commercial zones. But because the tiny block was subsequently included in the R-1 zone, it now requires a change in the law before it can again be used for a small business.

PINE CONE

Warning bells

When Roseth and planner Elizabeth Caraker suggested a zoning amendment to allow limited commercial use of the Forest Manor Lodge, as well as seven other non-residential properties adjacent to the business district which are also zoned R-1, it set off warning bells among several planning commissioners.

Robin Wilson said he thought a much more limited change that would apply only to the Forest Lodge property would be a better solution. "In this case, spot zoning might be the way to go," he said.

"I think putting The Pine Cone at that spot would be very cool," agreed commission chairman Bill Strid. But he wondered if changing the allowed uses on seven different properties should require an Environmental Impact Report and a lot more time and discussion, time The Pine Cone owners said they simply did not have because the close-of-escrow date was looming and they had to have an answer from the city before they could commit to buying the property.

Negative reaction

During the public hearing on the project, a parade of citizens spoke out against the idea of amending the zoning code to allow any changes in non-residential uses in the R-1 district. The speakers, including Dave Maradei, Jean White, Ken White, Jim Wright, Allan Paterson, Enid Sales, Larry Rodocker, Mike Brown, Melanie Billig and Jerry Holden, didn't have anything good to say about the Carmel Pine Cone or its desire for a permanent home. White was the most pointed, calling the newspaper's request "a stealth application."

"When it's gone you will have a hell of a mess. What should be built on this property is lower cost housing — why hasn't anybody proposed that?" the former mayor said.

In his extensive remarks at the podium, Wright insinuated that there was some kind of corruption in the planning department which resulted in Roseth's conclusion that the project deserved a "negative declaration" under CEQA.

"The man who was hired to do the traffic study didn't turn in his report until a week after Brian [Roseth] signed the negative declaration," Wright said, implying that it wasn't considered in Roseth's analysis.

Paterson, a former planning commissioner, agreed. "I think the staff analysis is phony. I think this is a bunch of flim-flam," he said.

And Sales, the historic preservation activist, testified that replacing motel guests with newspaper employees would somehow spoil Johan Hagemeyer's historic building. "This is an extremely important historic property," she said. "This zoning change will significantly impact its historic setting." She asked the city to require The Pine Cone to prepare an EIR to move its business four blocks.

Roseth responded that he didn't see how merely changing tenants would affect an historic building. And to Wright's accusation, he explained, "In an effort to meet the negative declaration timelines [required by state law], we hired an outside parking firm to do the analysis. We had an administrative draft that was all but final and based the negative declaration on that." He said there were no substantive changes in the official copy formally presented to the city a few days later.

After the commission voted unanimously to continue the discussion at a later meeting to give staff time to re-craft the proposal, Miller thanked them for their thoughtful consideration. Later he said the idea of moving The Pine Cone offices to the former studios of Johan Hagemeyer was dead.

"We'll have to drop it. We just don't have the time or the money to fight a drawn-out battle," Miller said. "Even if we came up with an amendment palatable to the commissioners, I'm pretty sure there were people in this audience just waiting to go to court to stop us. It's a shame they have so little regard for the problems of running a small business, even one as important as The Pine Cone."

CARMEL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE - 624-2522 - January 2004

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE By Tom Williams, CCC President

It's Your Turn Now

With the coming of the New Year we at the Chamber are happy to see our efforts over the past year continue to reap rewards for all of the membership. We saw the largest increase in our membership and the greatest retention of members since the founding of the organization. Participation in both mixers and ribbon cuttings continues to make these events one of the great networking resources for members and their guests. The Green Ribbon of Excellence Awards Dinner, which recognized the very high quality of our member businesses, was a sell out and a fabulous party to boot. The board of directors, introduced by Larry Hoover in last month's newsletter, is excited about the coming year and the opportunities that exist for expansion of our membership and "sphere of influence".

We are very excited about the prospect of expansion into areas which have long been considered beyond our scope or in direct conflict with past destination marketing plans. The jewels of the peninsula, Carmel-by-the-Sea, Carmel Valley, Big Sur and Pebble Beach are obvious partners of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce. This is where you, the member, can contribute in a big way. Bring along a business from one of the jewels to the next mixer or ribbon cutting. Introduce them to other members and show them how very vital our membership is and how very committed it is to the business environment not only in Carmel but also in the area as a whole. The draw to our community has always been more than one city or one beach. Each of our jewels offers an astounding array of business, lodging and restaurant opportunities. Our ability to attract and entertain tourists must include our sphere of influence if we expect to continue to enjoy our unparalleled position in the world of travel and tourism.

I look forward to the coming year and am so happy I have a board of directors willing to accept the challenges of leadership. They are also willing to help each other and help our membership to achieve the goal of expanded membership and participation. I appreciate the opportunity to serve this year as president of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce. I am honored and humbled by your trust and support. Thank you.

'Young turks' take their turn at Jazz & Blues Co.

THE JAZZ & Blues Company presents a special "Home for the Holidays" concert Saturday evening (Dec. 27) featuring young local jazz musicians Danny and Andrew McKay on guitars plus Ross Garren on piano and harmonica. The trio first met while in grade school in Carmel and through the years the "young turks" have fostered a musical relationship that has developed into a unique trio.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

The McKay brothers, perhaps best known for their work with the Blue Tones, have performed at five Monterey Bay Blues Festivals plus at prestigious clubs throughout the United States. Chris, 17, attends Robert Louis Stevenson and 18-year-old Andrew is a student at the University of Southern California's Thornton School of Music, along with Garren.

Garren, who like the McKays attended RLS, was awarded the 2002 ASCAP Young Composer Award for his composition "Smithomaniacs," a tune written for his compositional mentor, Biff Smith, a teacher at RLS and Berklee School of Music. The concert starts at 7:30 p.m. Call 624-6431 for reservations and details.

The Chicano All Stars, quickly becoming one of the most popular bands on the Monterey Peninsula, perform at Sly McFly's on Cannery Row Friday night, Dec. 26. Led by frontman Sam Martinez, the All Stars specialize in Latin grooves with a heavy dose of Carlos Santana.

Saturday night, guitar prodigy Corby Yates returns to Sly's for his first Monterey club appearance in a couple of years. Yates, now 22, was hailed as a young "Mozart of the blues" when he first exploded onto the Northern California blues scene at the tender age of 14. In 1998 he convincingly won Seattle's Jimi Hendrix Electric Guitar Competition in the 17-and-under category. After receiving a $25,000 scholarship, a rare prototype Fender Hendrix guitar, and the "Voodoo Chile" award from Al Hendrix, Jimi's father, the event climaxed with an unforgettable jam featuring Corby and Jimi's former Band of Gypsies' bandmates, Buddy Miles and Billy Cox. These days, Corby shows are consistently packed with diverse and enthusiastic audiences. Call 649-8050 for more information.

First Night Monterey good to go Dec. 31

Despite the departure of long-time executive director Paulette Lynch and of rumors of financial woes, First Night Monterey will go on as planned and thankfully so. An alcohol-free, family celebration of art and music, First Night Monterey is one of more than 200 First Night New Year's Eve celebrations throughout the United States and Canada.

Focusing on the variety of artistic expressions found in Monterey and other local communities, the annual event features more than 100 performers and groups at 50 performance sites.

Local musicians include a tasty sample of just about every musical style including bluegrass with Hootenanny and Homefire, jazz with Along Came Betty plus Kenny Stahl and friends, folk music with Jana Heller, Alisa Fineman and Kimball Hurd, blues with Red Beans & Rice, The Blue Tones and John Broadway Tucker, zydeco with the Cachagua Playboys, reggae with Jonah & the Whalewatchers and funk with the Unknown Jeromes.

This year's grand finale, which begins at 11:30 p.m. at the Custom House Plaza will feature the aforementioned Chicano All Stars.

First Night admission buttons can still be purchased at Longs Drugs and Mail Boxes, Etc. For schedules and more details visit their web page at www.firstnightmonterey.org or call 373-4778.

New Year's Eve parties are in abundance throughout the Monterey Peninsula this year and include a gala affair at the Doubletree Hotel in downtown Monterey featuring San Jose party legend Joe Sharino and his band.

Sharino has been a popular mainstay of festivals and corporate events in the Northern California for more than two decades with his good time party music and trademark sing-alongs. The recipient of numerous awards, Sharino gained national prominence in 1982 when he performed at the US festival in Southern California.

For information and tickets call 649-4511.

DUO ILLUMINATES THE STAGE WITH MEGAWATTS TO SPARE

By STEPHEN R. HARRIS

THERE IS good news: The solution to the energy crisis is at hand. The next time a power grid goes down, simply plug in Maggie Grant and Lisa Joffrey. Problem solved. These dynamic young pros, both members of Actor's Equity and currently starring in "Parallel Lives" at the Circle Theatre at Carmel's Golden Bough, together generate enough BTUs to light up the sky, coast to coast with megawatts to spare. Sadly, there is also bad news: If you're reading these scribbles hot off the press on Friday, Dec. 26, today is the last time you can be energized by these human dynamos, for tonight they close. So if you desire an additional holiday treat, drop this paper now, dial 645-9317, and reserve seats for today's 3 p.m. matinee or the closing performance at 7:30 this evening. You'll thank Santa if you do.

Gaffney, two feminist gagsters, this tour-de-force for two women comprises 14 scenes and 29 character roles in two acts totaling two hours, including one intermission. But while gags and jokes may prevail, even dominate, the finely wrought script exposes the entire feminine experience, virtually from cradle to grave, while stretching the envelope of emotion from laughter to tears. At the end, you'll be on your feet with "bravas" as I was, along with the rest of the audience at the matinee performance last Saturday afternoon.

While it might be better staged in a proscenium theater, director Grant has done a fine job adapting the piece to the round stage at The Circle. Several of the vignettes, however — particularly one hilarious mirror/mime sequence of the female shower and and make-up ritual — necessitate favoring one section of the audience over the others. Grant has obviously been aware of this and accordingly positions other scenes to compensate and balance the production for all.

Technical aspects are well accomplished, props and costume largely suggested rather than fully fleshed-out, and area lighting creates generous spaces for performance. Sound design by Charlie Steves and Buckley Marin is particularly effective, assisting in transitions between the multiplicity of vignettes.

But Grant and Joffrey could do this show in darkness and still shine convincingly. Don't miss this final opportunity to bask in their brilliance.

Cozy, continental Merlot Bistro pleases in so many ways

EARLY ON a recent rainy evening, as Christmas lights twinkled in Ocean Avenue shops and along the landscaped meridian, my dinner companion and I enjoyed the village scene from a window table at Merlot Bistro.

Shoppers hurried by with umbrellas in the early darkness, intent on buying a few more gifts before the stores closed, while we were dry and warm within.

What could be cozier and more festive during the holiday season than to take time out for early dinner entrees of, say, oven braised young rabbit with tamale dumplings or a roasted citrus chicken in a lemon grass sauce, paired with Vampire Merlot from Transylvania?

Transylvania? Merlot is obviously the pet varietal of this Csaba Ajan restaurant which touts the wine in its name, but carries an excellent full wine list. The dashing restaurateur, born in Transylvania — then part of Hungary but now in Rumania — takes delight in bringing his natal land's vampire vinous product to

The Vampire Merlot was excellent — rather big with berry-like fruit and a little more tannin than most Merlots. We enjoyed the black label's graphic design which sported a drop of blood from the point of the "V" in Vampire.

Vampire Merlot from charming little Carmel, a study in contrasts with its cute Hotsie Totsie fairy-tale architecture.

Since it was a cold and rainy night, we both started the dinner with cups of hot coconut shrimp soup ($3.95), and white bean soup ($3.75). The former conjured up visions of coconut-encrusted shrimp in a broth, but turned out to be a delicious coconut milk soup embellished with shrimp and vegetables. The white bean soup, flavored with carrots and celery, hit the spot.

It is seldom one finds on local menus braised young rabbit ($18.95) in a fine country gravy, served with tamale dumplings — a winning combination in our estimation, one that could stand up nicely to the Vampire Merlot. But the succulent accouterments were absolutely inspired: cabernet red cabbage and mango tequila relish. What a delightful blend of flavors to accompany the rabbit! The meat was a bit dry, due perhaps to over braising in the oven without a lid — but that's just a guess.

The roasted citrus chicken with lemon grass sauce ($15.95) was generous in portion, with crispy potato pancakes, and organic vegetables.

All desserts are $6.25. We chose a fresh strawberry tart and New York cheesecake with port and raspberry coulis — and wonderful Ily espresso.

country cuisine, Merlot! Bistro lives up to its nomenclature very well.

But the great plus for this restaurant is its innovations. There is no run-of-the-mill fare here; the menu has been thought out creatively. Escargot ravioli with wild mushrooms and tomato coulis ($8.95); warm Oriental scallops and arugula salad with mango and bell pepper confit in ginger dressing ($11.50); roasted lamb and mango chutney pizza ($12.95) and even a filet mignon and gorgonzola pizza ($12.50).

For main dishes, such unusual combinations as seared fresh tuna with candied orange zest, wasabi spiced succotash and rice ($19.25); vineyard casserole of tender beef in pastry shell and zinfandel sauce (15.95); and Merlot-poached pear with Spumante ($6.25) are indicative of the inventiveness of the chefs. Executive Chef Jason Giles is a graduate of the California CIA, San Francisco, former sous chef at The Lodge at Pebble Beach and Sonoma Mission Inn. He is backed by chef de cuisine Fernando Aguilera and sous chef Paul Vega.

This is not to say that Caesar salad, fettuccine Alfredo, grilled fresh salmon fillet, grilled New York steak and roasted rack of lamb are to be bypassed. In fact the salmon and lamb are signature dishes at Merlot! Bistro.

A kids' menu has tempting items from $4.50 to $5.95. Breakfast starts at 8 a.m.; luncheon features a slightly shorter menu than that offered for dinner, and adds sandwiches for $8.50 to $11.95, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The restaurant has been through several incarnations since its long run as Scandia, when Csaba Ajan and Anton Salameh (another dashing restaurateur) purchased it. The name, menu, and decor were radically changed to Café American before reinventing itself as Merlot! Bistro and then as Merlot! Wine Country Bistro.

You'll love the innovative menu and calm atmosphere. Enter through the front door on Ocean, or from down the passage to the left, and you'll be greeted with festive holiday decorations.

"We were moving all our apparatus out on the street even before the shaking stopped," Reade said. The move is "standard protocol" for all fire stations in an earthquake, but even more so in Carmel.

"The fire house was a WPA project and was built in 1934," said engineer Chuck August. "It's made of poured concrete, and the rebar [steel reinforcing] is about 3 feet apart, so there's no way it meets modern standards."

Behind him, five fire trucks and ambulances lined one side of Sixth Avenue. Another fire truck and an ambulance were on the other side. The fire station garages were empty.

"If the quake had been bigger — like Loma Prieta in 1989 — we would close the street and park them right down the middle, so nothing could fall on them," August added. The Carmel stone facing on the fire station poses a particular hazard for anybody on the sidewalk or a vehicle parked at the curb, he said.

One fire truck remained parked at the public works yard on Torres, Reade said. It has been based there since last year, to make sure at least one truck remains operational even if the fire station suddenly collapses.

Tuesday morning, all the fire trucks and ambulances remained outside, in case of strong aftershocks or that Monday's quake was a precursor to a bigger one.

"We leave them outside a minimum of 24 hours," Reade said. In case of severe earthquake damage, there is also a backup plan to move the city's entire firefighting operation to Vista Lobos, she said.

The lack of earthquake reinforcement at the fire station has long been a source of frustration for the city. Last February, the city council decided to make retrofitting the station a priority, at an estimated cost of $400,000. According to Reade, the city is in the process of selecting a structural engineer and work could begin next summer.

and Seventh and was named for an Indian chief of the Choctaw tribe, who came to Carmel in the '30s and '40s to retire.

"He really endeared himself to the community. Often he would wear his full Indian regalia and visit schools to teach the children roping techniques," said Prine.

Even the town's most observant walkers have probably passed Der Ling Lane on their way up or down Ocean Avenue, between Dolores and Lincoln, and not seen it. Named after a Chinese princess, this fairytale corridor leads you under arbors woven with flowers down a cobblestone path onto a patio encircled by greenery and oak trees.

The 7 Arts Court on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh marks the first place in Carmel where local artists displayed their work. Herbert Heron, founder of the Forest Theater in 1910, purchased this courtyard so local artists could have a central venue for showing their work.

Some of the courtyards in Carmel end in charming two-story flats and were artist's studios at one time.

"The second story building in 7 Arts Court was the studio of famous photographer Edward Weston in the 1930s," says Prine.

While visitors to Carmel often have to leave town before taking in more than just a few of its sites, locals can take their time and tour downtown systematically. But first, they have to learn to park several blocks from their destination, taking the opportunity to explore passages and venture into courtyards. Then, they may find themselves closer to the Carmel character they think they know so well.

Crouch joins cream of the crop

CITY CLERK Karen Crouch has been named a Certified Municipal Clerk by the International Institute of Municipal Clerks for passing the IMC's educational, experience and service requirements.

She attained the designation by graduating from the Institute of Public Service program at Seattle University. She studied "in-depth courses in managerial and leadership skills, social and interpersonal concerns and technical training needed to deal with changes taking place in government today," according to the IMC — a statement obvious to anyone who has been greeted by Crouch's smiling face at city hall.

Crouch has been employed by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea since 1995, serving as planning services coordinator before being appointed City Clerk in December 2000.

Stevenson runner competes in state championship — despite the flu

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AMID THE cheers for Carmel High School's stellar state champion cross-country team, the glories of one lone Robert Louis Stevenson runner, who competed while ridden with the flu, went unsung.

Gabe LaMothe, a Carmel resident and junior at RLS, won all-league honors at the Mission Trail Athletic League championship in Toro Park earlier this year, and during Central Coast Section competition, he qualified for an individual berth at the Nov. 29 state championships in Fresno, according to his mom, Eileen LaMothe.

"At CCS, he had to come in the top dozen, out of a couple hundred runners," she said. "So he had to earn it."

Unfortunately, Gabe caught the flu over Thanksgiving. But he didn't let the illness keep him from running in Fresno, which was his second trip in the state championships.

Accompanied by his coach, Cleve Thayer, the Stevenson junior left his bed only to race. He finished in the top third, but the virus stopped him from improving his best time.

"We were shocked he could do that well," his mother said. "He did the best he could, under the circumstances."

Gabe's honor complemented the recognition given RLS' entire athletic program, which received the Roger Fernando Pursuing Victory with Honor Sportsmanship Award from Mission Trail Athletic League earlier this year.

CANADAS

"They get out in front of the Army," he said.

The older Canadas, a Greenfield resident who works for the county housing authority, said he talks to his son monthly. The two have not spoken since Dec. 13 when Saddam Hussein was captured.

Canadas' grandmother is Sherlock Holmes pub co-owner Charlyne Macugay.

"He's called me a couple of times from over there. He was on a four-day leave in a little country I can't even pronounce," she said. The last time he phoned was about a month ago, from Qatar. "He writes and keeps in contact as much as possible, and I watch the news all the time to see what's going on."

Docent training for Point Sur lighthouse

THERE WILL be a free tour of the Point Sur Light Station Sunday afternoon, Jan. 25, for people interested in becoming volunteer docents. Advance reservations are required.

The tour will be followed by training orientation on Feb. 22 at 1 p.m. at the California State Parks District Office, 2211 Garden Road, Monterey, and by 16 evening training classes beginning Tuesday, March 2.

To participate, leave a message at the Point Sur Volunteer Office, 649-7139.

'He's a real go-getter. He never liked to be second in anything.'

— Charlyne Macugay

Macugay said she was not surprised her grandson became an Army paratrooper.

"He's a real go-getter. He never liked to be second in anything," she said. Also, "his grandfather was in the Korean War and his uncle was career Army."

Christmastime has been difficult without him around, and Macugay said she prays for her grandson often.

Other locals also follow Canadas' military career. The paratrooper's former boss at Carmel Valley Backhoe often sends letters and packages, and the flag of the 82nd Airborne flies above Hacienda Hay & Feed on Carmel Valley Road.

In the time since Canadas enlisted, he's definitely changed, his father observed.

"He seems a lot more grown up," he said, adding that being part of the elite 82nd Airborne will produce life-time friendships. "They're very tight knit," Ed Canadas said. "I think they're living life more than we are."

Growing Internet Use by Home Buyers

According to a very reliable survey sponsored by the National Association of Realtors (NAR), when people started looking for their first (or next) principle residence in 2001, 41% of them logged on to the Internet to help them find a home and learn about today's real estate opportunities.

A very recently completed survey, again by the NAR, asked questions of 45,000 people who had bought and/or sold a home in the first quarter of 2003. Rather amazingly, 71% reported using the Internet in buying a home. That's phenomenal growth, and great evidence that the Internet is becoming an integral part of our lives.

At the same time, we have further evidence that the Internet doesn't replace real estate or mortgage professionals, as some wild-eyed seers assured us it would a few years ago. To the contrary, nearly 90% of those using the Internet in their home buying process called on the assistance of real estate professionals, whereas 79% of those who didn't use the Internet called on real estate professionals for help in finding a home and engineering the best possible transaction.

It seems that the more we know about the intricacies of real estate transactions, the more we need the assistance of a capable, compassionate real estate advisor. Not too surprisingly, the typical Internet-using homebuyer was 38 years old, whereas the typical non-Internet-using homebuyer was 47 years old. This, too, suggests that use of the Internet can only grow in the future.

Back to reality

WHEN DOROTHY finally figured out how to get back to Kansas, she carried with her the hard-won lesson that the real world — despite its imperfections — was vastly preferable to the world of her imagination. There was a similar feeling at the first meeting of the new water board last week.

As Larry Foy and Michelle Knight took their oaths of office, forming a new common-sense majority with Dave Potter, Alvin Edwards and David Pendergrass, there was an overarching realization that they face a series of tough problems with no guarantee of success. But at least the water board was no longer the Land of Oz.

There was still a touch of fantasy about the proceedings. Kristi Markey, immediately before she took her oath as a new board member, told a reporter from KSBW-TV that she was sure the new board would work together for the common good. But then she dismissed out-of-hand the idea of building a desal plant at Moss Landing. It just isn't practical, she said. In other words, "We will work together for the common good, as long as everybody agrees with me."

We think a Moss Landing plant, of the sort proposed by Nader Agha, is the clear front-runner to solve the Peninsula's perennial water shortage, not to mention the salt water intrusion problem in the Salinas Valley, as well as water crises affecting numerous other communities.

But it is by no means certain that Moss Landing is the answer. "Working together" means studying options with an open mind, not simply to justify one's preconceived ideas. There must be a new water supply to offset the overdraft of the Carmel River and to provide enough water for the basic human needs of the community. If Watsonville, Hollister or Salinas want to chip in, fine. But there's no need to build a colossal plant that drowns the people of the Monterey Peninsula in expensive, excess water that will tempt big-time developers.

The first thing the water board should do is canvass the mayors of the peninsula cities and the board of supervisors to determine how much water they need. Then they have to move quickly to figure out how to provide it. By the end of 2004, the plan should be on its way to fruition.

Water is an essential commodity that should be made available at a reasonable cost and with a minimum of bureaucratic hassles. That takes the courage to ignore emotional, pointless criticism, the intelligence to sort through reams of conflicting studies, data and advice, and compassion for people who need water to achieve their personal goals, not to mention an acceptable level of human hygiene and comfort.

As the Wizard did for the Lion, the Scarecrow and the Tin Man, the voters have imbued the new water board with all the qualities it needs to succeed.

Letters to the Editor

Two valleys

Dear Editor:

It appears to me that residents and businesses of Carmel Valley need their own water district. As a newcomer to the valley, I am astounded to find that residents believe they are adequately represented by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. All one needs to do to realize this is not the case is drive up the valley a few miles, and wonder what lies to the north of the mountains.

It is the Salinas River and valley, and it has its own watershed. A majority of the members of the MPWMD live there. They have two dams, two large reservoirs, flood control, water recreation and even some hydro.

To the south, on the other hand, is the paltry little Carmel River, most of the year dry half way down to the ocean. Even the city of Carmel is lucky to wind up with water from this source.

My thinking is that the existing water district is a creation of a legislature which, in all its wisdom, did not take into account the fact that the Peninsula derives water from two watersheds. It was not envisioned that the residents of Carmel Valley might wish to control the dams and reservoirs there. For one thing, they would not wish to endure an enormous dam which would provide water for Salinas Valley as well as Carmel Valley.

Nor was it contemplated that a conflict of interest might occur, especially if Cal-Am decides to extend into the Salinas Valley. Why can't we also have flood control, recreation, perhaps hydro and a salmon run, along with drinking water?

Harry Rockey, Carmel Valley

Dinner a big hit

Dear Editor:

The 33rd annual Community Thanksgiving Dinner was a huge success. Approximately 2,500 meals were served! I would like to thank the Monterey Kiwanis Club for sponsoring this event as well as the many companies and individuals who generously donated money, turkeys, other food-stuffs and paper products. I would also like to thank the hundreds of volunteers who readied the facilities, prepared and served the food, and cleaned up afterwards. Heartfelt thanks goes out to the management and staff of the Monterey Fairgrounds for their kindness and assistance, as well as Sand City Chief of Police, Mike Klein, and his officers, for delivering hundreds of meals and good cheer to shut-ins throughout the Monterey Peninsula. Of course, a special thanks to our fabulous chefs who prepared a most magical meal: Jeff Parker, Randy Young, Jimmy Schaeffler and their many helpers. To all of the volunteer men and women, boys and girls, your labor of love was a wonderful gift to a grateful community. Thank you.

Michael S. Fields, coordinator, 33rd Annual Community Thanksgiving Dinner

At the Culinary Center of Monterey on Dec. 8, Dina Eastwood joined chef Kurt Grasing of Grasing's and Kurt's Chop House (right photo), while former San Francisco 49er Keena Turner helped chef Cal Stamenov of Bernardus Lodge prepare high cuisine for guests at a fundraiser for MY Museum. The children's museum is moving to a new building in downtown Monterey and raised almost $50,000 at the event to help fund the move and a host of new programs. Thom Steinbeck, son of the Nobel Prize winning author, thanked the museum for helping teach science to young people because, "the public schools don't have the funding to do it."

LUCY CULVER, 4 1/2, is a chocolate Labrador who frequents Sade's bar and Ah, Shucks oyster bar at night when she wanders away from her Camino Real home in search of the dazzling night life and conviviality of downtown Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Fortunately, she is a dog about town, and so her parents Julie and Ed Culver are notified immediately, and she is escorted home again to resume her Raccoon Watch in the back garden before coming in to bed down in her luxury chair.

Lucy is full of boundless energy, loves to dash into the breakers at Carmel Beach for a thrown ball, digs extremely deep holes in the sand around a found tennis ball (the most cherished kind), chases and catches Frisbees with great accuracy, and plays with her many friends, all of whom dropped by her home with Christmas presents.

It boggles the mind, but Lucy, who is our Christmas 2003 Sandy Claws, wears an attractive collar with "Santa Paws" emblazoned on it in iridescent lettering, and her boy friend is Sandy, a two-pound Chihuahua who evidently is attracted to queen size cuties such as Lucy. And they say there are no coincidences!

Lucy comes from a family of brunettes: Mom Julie and brother Nova — who lives on September Ranch as a working cattle quarter horse — and Lucy herself are all tawny beauties.

As we left Lucy at the top o' the dunes at Ninth Avenue and Scenic Road, she was more than half submerged in her sandy beach hole, staring out at us with a supremely pleased look on her face. Too bad we had run out of film.

Merry Christmas to all our many Sandy Claws of this year and years gone by, and God bless those who have passed on to their heavenly reward of endless beaches and old friends.

REAL ESTATE

A rustic town where everyone was welcome

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Development Company's first customer in 1903 was an African-American woman named Mrs. E. A. Foster who bought two lots on Dolores and 10 lots on the south side of Ocean Avenue for $1,000.

That year, Mrs. Foster also bought a carpenter shop on Dolores, where she lived for her first eight months in Carmel. By year's end, she sold that building to Roland and Emma Henderson, an African-American couple who soon opened their own restaurant at the site.

Early Carmel could boast of another restaurant — owned by The Pine Inn's first cook, Pon Singó serving Chinese food.

And the north end of town along Monterey and Lobos Streets was known as Carmel's own Tortilla Flats, home to a community of Native American and Hispanic residents. Children from the Tortilla Flats neighborhood would often walk down to Ocean Avenue to sell tamales or other cooked food, according to local historian Kent Seavey.

The Carmel of 1903 — captured in detail in Sharron Lee Hale's book, "A Tribute to Yesterday" — welcomed anyone who was prepared to make the rustic village their home.

The result was a rich, diverse flavor in early Carmel.

In those days, Carmel was even known as a "feminine friendly" place, Seavey said. "Independent women could find an equal footing here," he said.

Moving to Carmel allowed dreamers to put their entrepreneurial and creative spirits to the test.

Newcomers picked up work as carpenters, builders, stagecoach drivers or mail carriers. Or they would find a need in town — and fill it. "The early folk were really working people who kept the infrastructure in play so you could get your food and your dry goods," Seavey said.

Carmel people were often flexible about taking on work that might be outside their realm of interest. Artist Mary DeNeale Morgan agreed to serve as the Pine Inn's first manager as a favor to friend J. Franklin Devendorf.

Fascinating records

Devendorf and his partner Frank Powers were "equal opportunity" businessmen long before most of the country embraced that ideal.

The businessmen's earliest records show that many of the first lots were sold to independent women, explained Sarah Berling, a member of the city's centennial committee.

Berling has been poring over the meeting minutes taken during the first few years of the Carmel Development Company's existence — records that were made available by Devendorf's granddaughter, Jane Galante.

The minutes reveal quite a bit about the way Powers and Devendorf conducted business, she said.

"There was a very cooperative friendly tone," Berling said. "If people couldn't pay, they were constantly willing to compromise and make different arrangements."

Sometimes the businessmen wooed prospective residents to town. During one meeting in 1905, Powers reported that the Carmel Development Company granted poet George Sterling a five year lease for land near Torres with the right to buy it after the lease was up, Berling said.

In another entry, Powers sold six lots to photographer Arnold Genthe for the price of $1,750, with the provision that Genthe "erect an artistic house."

Apparently the photographer kept up his end of the bargain. The Camino Real home he designed in 1905 remains a Carmel classic. Last year, Dana and Vince Vannelli, current owners of the home, were honored by the Carmel Heritage Society for their "sensitive restoration" of the cottage.

Another house that might have caught the attention of passersby in 1903 was John P. Cogle's wooden gable and wing house on San Carlos.

Perhaps a handful of homes in Carmel stood out for their artistry while most of the town's early dwellings were rather modest.

"They were working class houses built from local materials," Seavey said.

Most of Carmel's earliest settlers probably would have to take a bit of a walk to reach their nearest neighbors.

"The houses would have been quite sparse," said Berling. "There weren't more than 70 or 80 houses. It was very rural, casual and low key."

Carmel history buff Kay Prine paints a picture of the early days that's difficult to imagine when strolling by the million dollar homes of today. "There would have been chickens running loose, horses right by your house, maybe even a cow," Prine said.

Photographer Arnold Genthe built this home on Camino Real with tree trunks supporting the sloping roof over a wide front veranda. He promised developer Frank Powers the house would be artistic, thus gaining six lots for $1,750.

Downtown Carmel was similarly unsophisticated. Ocean Avenue was "a dirt road with some false fronted buildings on either side," Seavey said.

Out-of-town travelers low on cash could stay in tents set up behind the Pine Inn for $1 to $3 a week "and just kind of hang," Seavey said.

As Carmel's centennial year comes to a close, it's worth remembering that the people who first came to the village 100 years ago were clearly not on a quest for elegance or high style. Yet they helped Carmel develop a style all its own.

Prine believes the original residents were drawn by the area's stunning natural beauty.

And Carmel surely had its share of free spirits grateful to live in a place where they wouldn't feel confined.

"There were very few wannabes," Seavey said. "All the people here had a reason to be here."

To all my wonderful clients and friends...

After 31 years in the Title and Escrow business, I have accepted a promotion as the Northern California Escrow Trainer. As of January 1, 2004, in my new position I will be traveling throughout Northern California training new managers and Escrow Officers within the company. I look forward to my new career, but at the same time, it is bittersweet to say goodbye to all my friends and clients. For the past 16 years I've been the manager of the Carmel office, and I would like to offer my most sincere thanks and appreciation to all of my clients, so many of whom have become dear friends. Thank you for all your support and loyalty over the years; I could not have done any of this without you. Please help me in welcoming Susan Clark to her new position of branch Manager of the Carmel office as of January 1, 2004.

Kindest regards, David Ziel
